A BAD DAY

The first thing was my roommate slammed the door on my big toe on his way out to reveille. As I stood there screaming on one foot, I attracted the attention of my beloved flight, who, in sympathy with my plight, erupted into peals of laughter. When they finally stopped, I told them in my most scornful voice that such hilarity was unwarranted, and that a "Buck-Up" was coming. "Laugh that one off if you want!" I glowered, and limped in to shave.

They were still laughing by First Call. As they went by my door they opened it, looked in, laughed a little harder, and closed it again.

I was pondering the shallowness of the men in my flight on my way out to ranks when I met Walter. "Say, I hear you lost a toe-to-toe argument with your door this morning! Ha! Ha!" Walter is the squadron wit. "Did you know you've got a rip in the seat of your pants?" continued Walter.

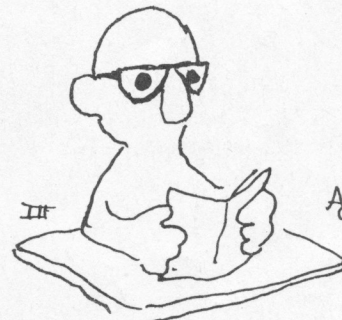

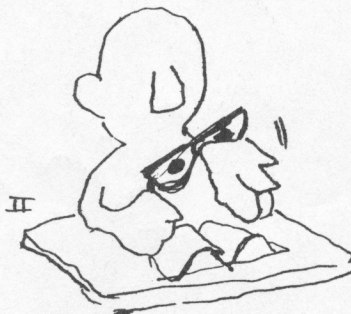

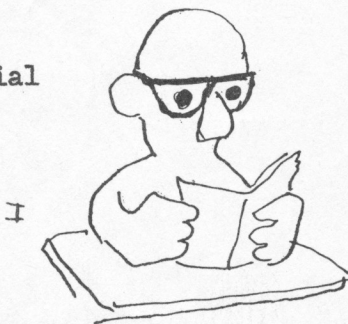

"That right?" I replied dryly. I quickened my gait and lost him in the shuffle. Out in ranks I was greeted by a fellow Mech major who informed me that I flunked the last GR.

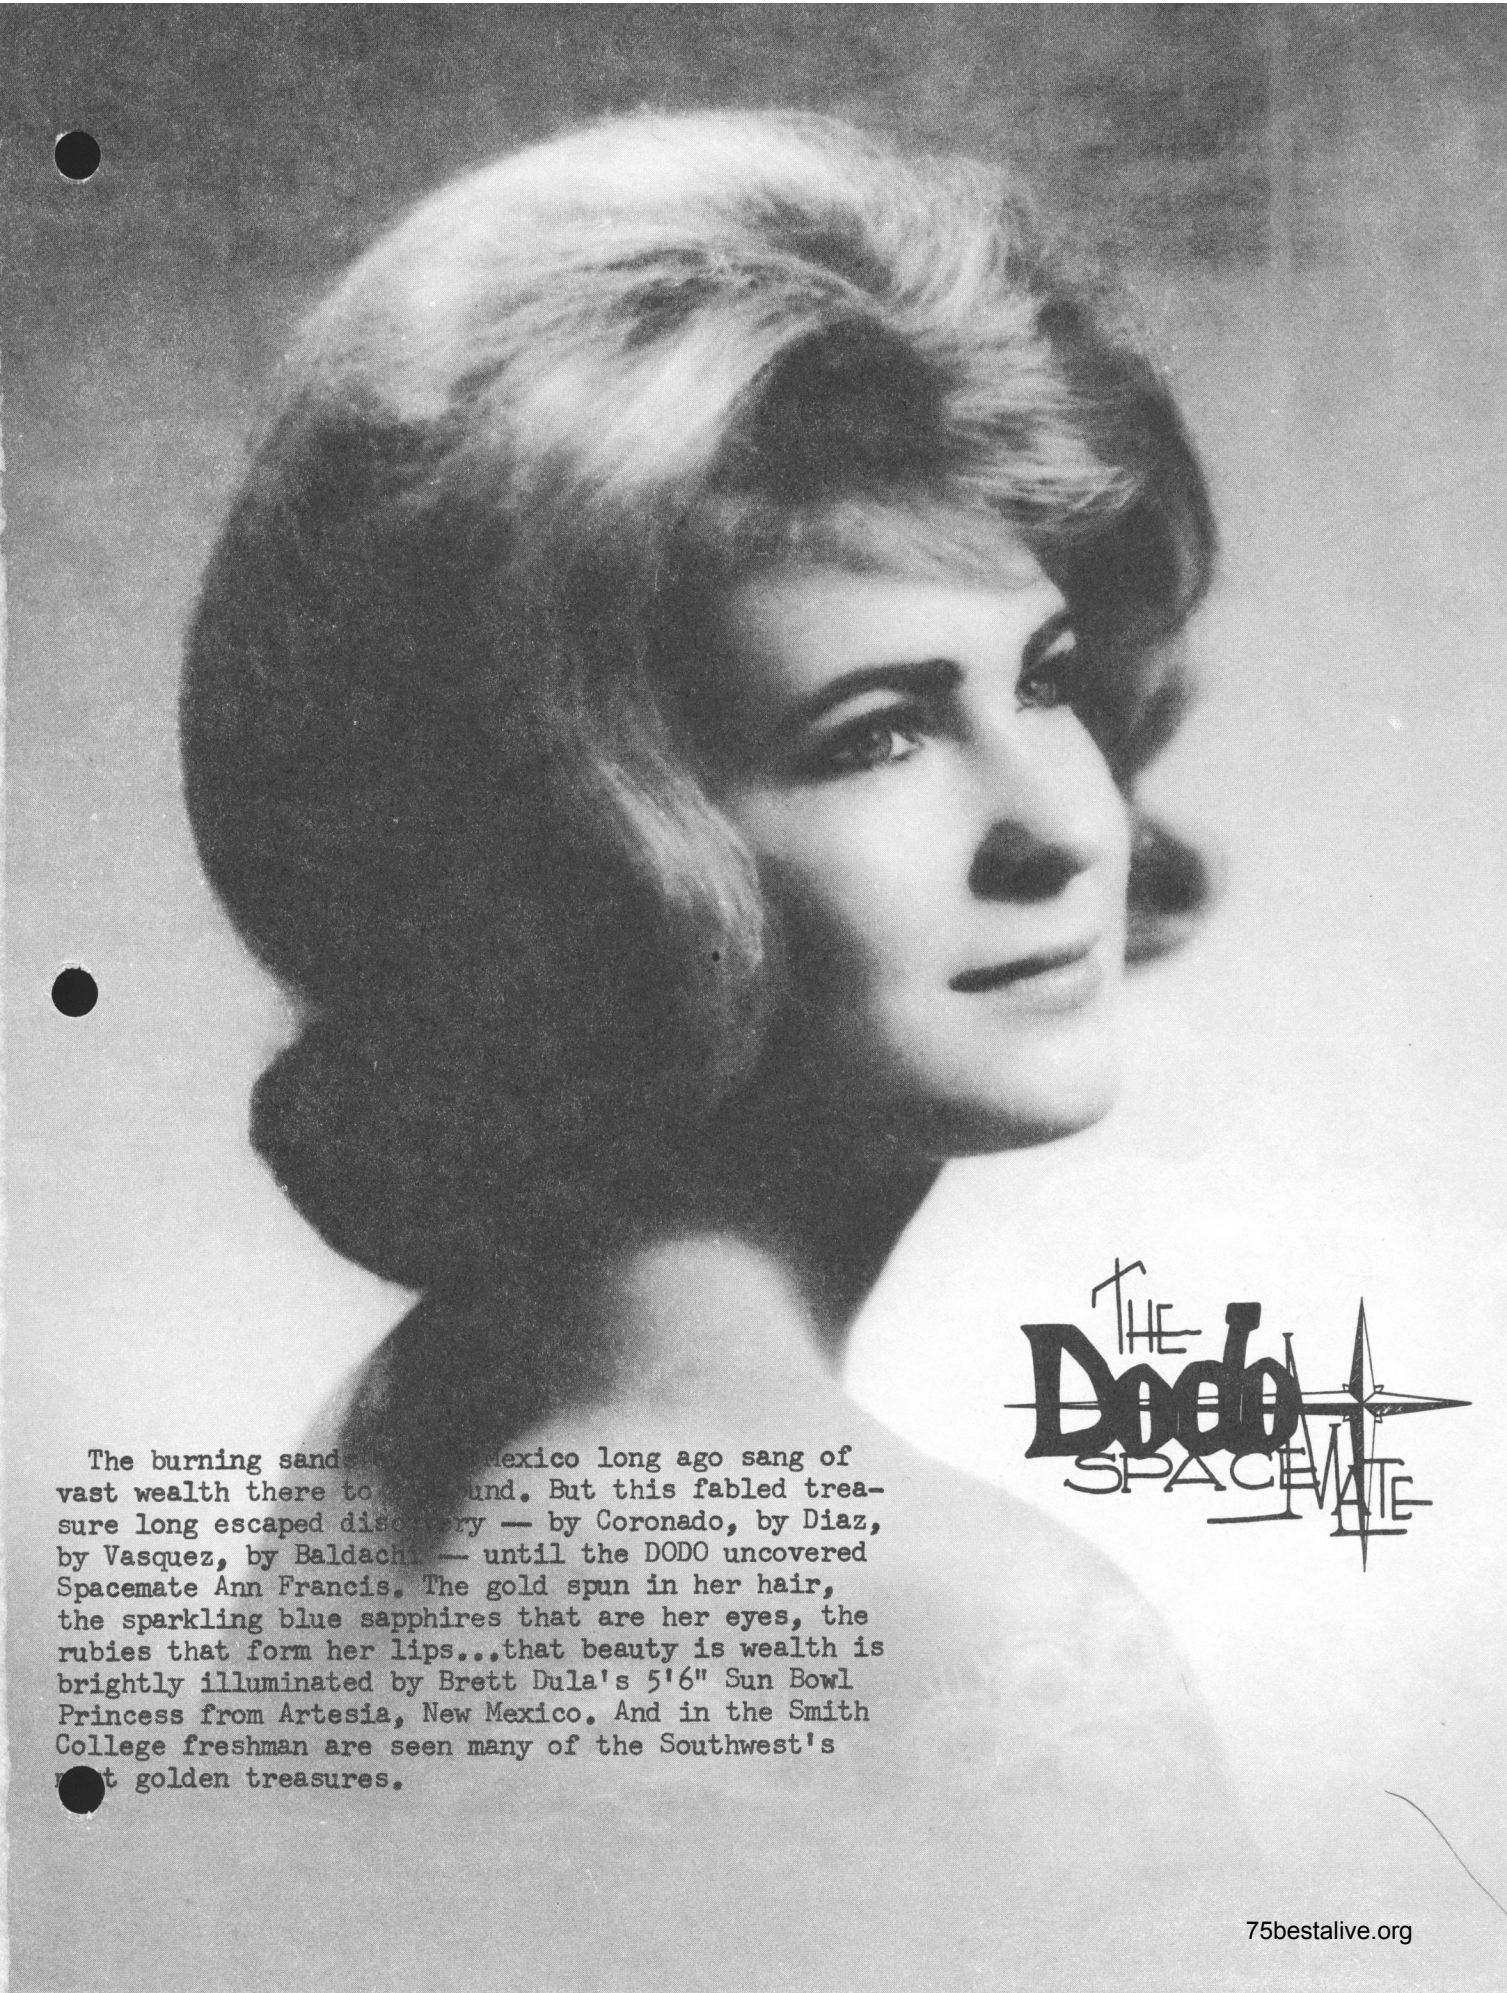

The squadron fell in. Immediately a chorus of half-stifled giggles exploded behind me. For once Walter (The Rat) wasn't kidding. I really did have a rip in my trousers-- as I was repeatedly informed all the way to breakfast.

I was in the midst of a portion of yellow death and feeling somewhat miserable when the Wing was called to attention to practice a march-on. While I was standing at attention and awaiting the signal to salute, a waiter nonchalantly drove his cart over both my toes. My anguished cry of pain was met by icy stares from everybody around, along with whispers to "knock it off." Gritting my teeth, I thought to myself, 'Cheer up. Things aren't so bad. At least you'll get a letter from Linda today.'

The burning sands of Mexico long ago sang of vast wealth there to be found. But this fabled treasure long escaped discovery — by Coronado, by Diaz, by Vasquez, by Baldrich — until the DODO uncovered Spacemate Ann Francis. The gold spun in her hair, the sparkling blue sapphires that are her eyes, the rubies that form her lips...that beauty is wealth is brightly illuminated by Brett Dula's 5'6" Sun Bowl Princess from Artesia, New Mexico. And in the Smith College freshman are seen many of the Southwest's most golden treasures.

THE LEGEND OF THE TROLL

"Once upon a midnight dreary, as I pondered, weak and weary" ... to compute the actual  $\mu$  of a certain hangman's noose.  $\epsilon = m\alpha\alpha$ ,  $\epsilon = r$  ...

... My door burst open. THERE, BEFORE ME, a mere silhouette in the dim light of the Golden Age, there stood this shape, neither geometrical nor symmetrical. No, not real, far beyond. And from it came "Authorized Late Lights?" "Who?" I managed. A glow from within it illuminated a braided white tail, or trunk, carefully draped <sup>about</sup> a grossly sloping protrusion, which angled away from a pimple-cratered head.....

The young Falcons, whose record is now 4-2, trailed the entire game until Yankee's final shot. They were behind by as much as eight points during the contest. Guard Tom Markham led the AFA scoring with 20 points, while Yankee added 14. Jim Boston was the Falcon's leading rebounder, grabbing nine out of a team total of only 24. The Academy team outshot the Ranger frosh, 21-19, but were able to hit only 17 of 29 from the charity line, while the home team converted 20 in 25 attempts. The Freshmen's next action will be Saturday against the Wyoming frosh at Laramie, in a preliminary to the weekly contest. The Freshman Cowboys were 72-63 victors in the first meeting between the teams on the Academy court.
