OPERATION EASTER

Everybody knows that Spring Break is just around the corner, and a lot of us have probably forgotten about Easter and its significance to the Wing. Operation Easter will be in its sixth year and will give the Wing the chance to excel, except this time because we want to. In the past years of Operation Easter, alot of handicapped, orphaned, and/or otherwise underprivileged from the surrounding communities have been really happy for a day. It's not strange, either, to realize that a lot of cadets really enjoy showing some small stranger a good time.

Anyone who has participated in Operation Easter can tell of the entertainment in Arnold Hall and the gym and the Easter egg hunts. Those of you who haven't participated will get your chance this year. It won't be long before information on Operation Easter is officially distributed, so keep on the look-out, and don't get caught out in the cold.

GREAT FIGHTS!

THE WING OPEN

"And in this corner at 205 pounds is the defending Wing Champion, Joe Pollocka." You guessed it, sports fans, it's that time of the year again. When you can grab a six-pack of your favorite brew and make your way down to the Coliseum for a Friday night of excitement, blood, and organized mayhem. I know you're all thinking that basketball season is almost over, but I'm speaking of the Wing Open, which is just around the corner. I guess you all think you're being roped into something, but really, a sport like boxing is tough to beat. In what other sport do you need the legs of a long-distance runner, the arms of a gymnast, the mind of a scientist, and the face of an ape? If there is another sport, I, for one, can't think of anything except maybe a chimpanzee with a PHD running a three-minute mile on his hands.

Anyone who has seen a Wing Open can tell you that you will see eight grueling, three-round matches between eight pairs of guys who really don't want to do anything except beat the living daylights out of their opponents. As opposed to professional boxing, you probably won't hear the boxers asking each other what their names are, but you'll see a lot more fighting.

Teacher (warning her pupils against catching cold): I had a little brother seven years old, and one day he took his new sled out into the snow. He caught pneumonia, and three days later he died.

Silence for ten seconds.

Voice from rear: Where's his sled?

He couldn't decide on a costume for the party. Finally he had an inspiration. Spraying deodorant over his beard, he showed up as an armpit.

"Darling, I could sit here and do nothing but look at you forever."

"That's what I'm beginning to think."

HE: Have you heard about the new college game?

SHE: No, what is it?

HE: Button, button, here comes the house mother.

"The quiz will cover your question, Mr. Bilch."

"Let's read that once more before we ban it."

A canny Scot was engaged in an argument with the conductor as to whether the fare was to be five or ten cents. Finally the disgusted conductor picked up the Scot's suitcase and tossed it off the train, just as they were crossing a long bridge. It landed with a mighty splash.

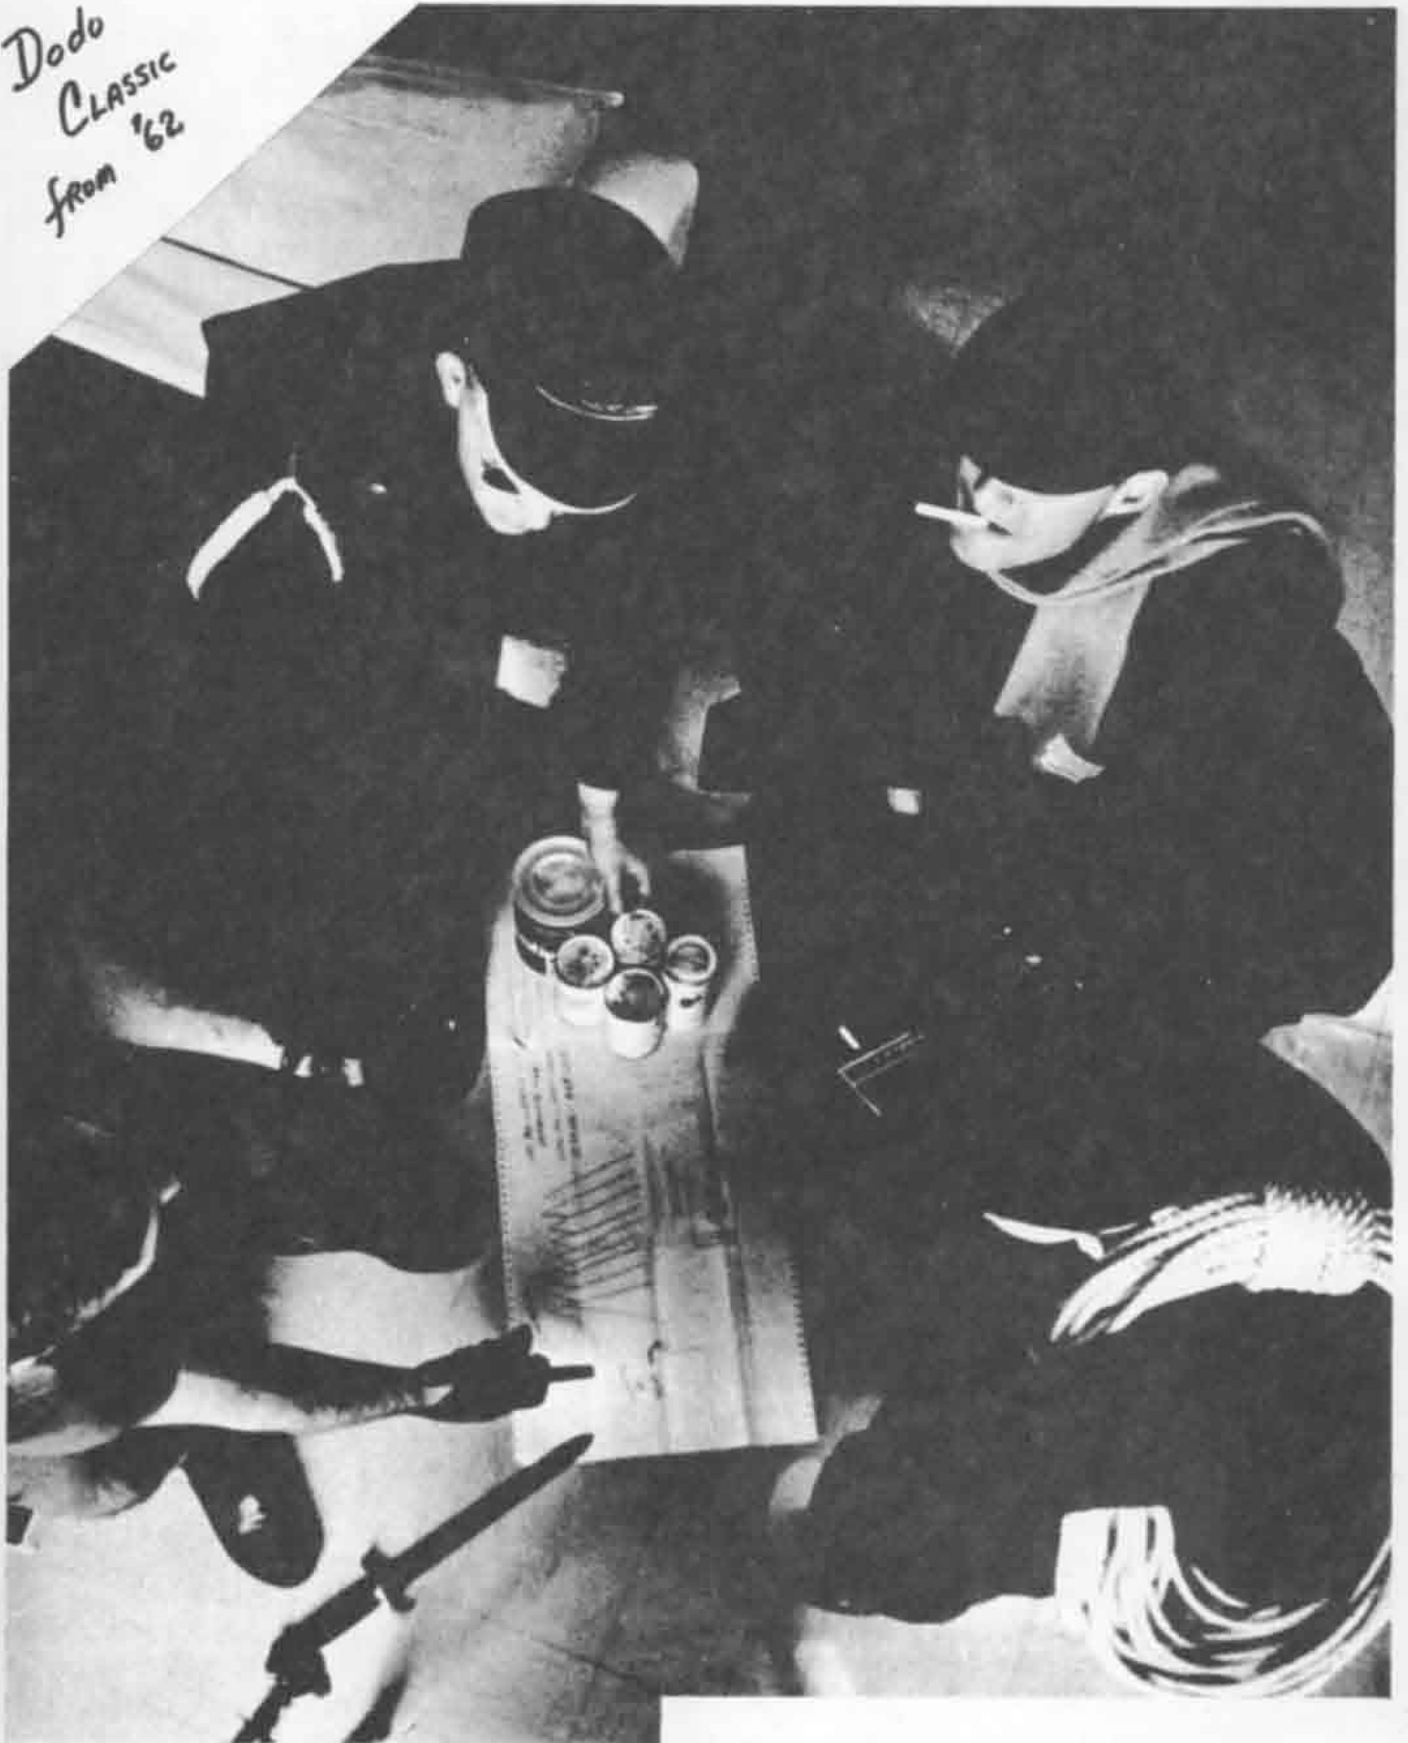

"Hoot mon," cried Sandy (the Scot) "First you try to rob me and now you've drowned my boy!"

A spinster was shocked at the language used by workmen repairing a telephone line near her home, so she wrote the company. The foreman was requested immediately to make a report of what happened.

The report read as follows:

"Me and Spike were on this job. I was up on the pole and let hot lead fall on Spike—right down his neck, Spike looked up at me and said: "Really, Harry, you must be more careful."

CASE
U

* IDENTIFICATION * OF....

UNIDENTIFIED FRIVOLOUS OBSCURITIES

WOO
POO

- 1) First, most obvious is the bright-eyed, intelligent look as he scrutinize you. Note especially the steady, hard gaze behind which he masks his emotions.
- (2) Casual, but slightly outdated black smoking jacket.
- (3) Salty sea captain pipe - unlit.
- (4) Rankness indicated on his sleeves.
- (5) Shoes (elevated) may be white, brown, or black, depending on what uniform he's wearing; black and white both appear as grey, while brown parallels olive drab. On occasion, he may mix colors for color.

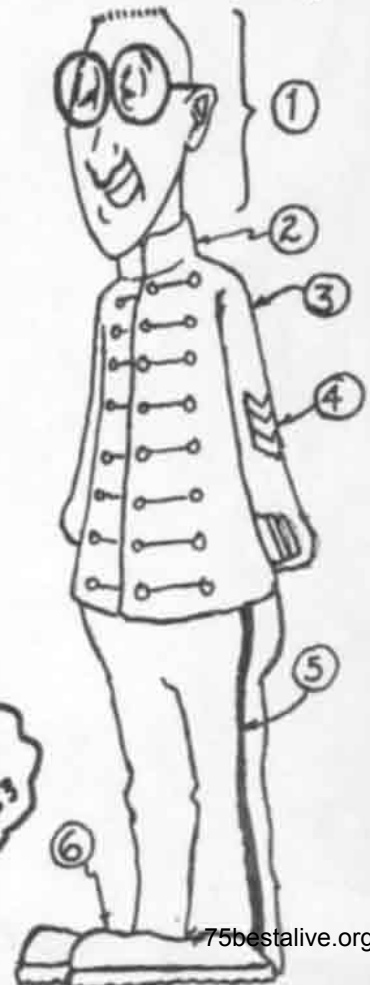

Sometimes the below will not always be certain identification since you may catch him in the shower or on the varsity Parchisi court. In these cases, you might observe his mannerisms. He might cry "Rangerrrrr" as he sidles up to the cold water, or say Clauswitz or MacArthur while losing his third game. In any event, you can always ask him; you could have a turncoat middle on your hands, OR an airborne AF Cadet(?).

- (1) Faces are pretty nearly normal; don't judge on this alone.
- (2) High, uncomfortable-looking, tight collar can be obvious giveaway, but do not confuse with clergy.

- (3) Musky gray uniform could indicate highway patrol, or mid'n with lint; but,
- (4) addition of oversized enlisted man stripes indicates a desire to play army; hence,

- combining these two makes for near positive identification.
- (5) Thick, black stripes on various parts of the uniform.

- (6) Shoes (w/tank track soles) and lower cuffs usually caked with mud, residue from camaflogue training of two years ago...

If these most obvious identification features are missing, there are several alternatives open to you. Tattoos of ships, heart, or () may appear on his bony, hairless chest or arms. He may stick salt in his water or orange drink while your back is turned, or whistle "Barnacle Bill" while tying a half hitch in your lamp cord. If he does none of these, you'd better ask him; he's either a West Pointer or a lost civilian!
