The Now Frontier

"The Now Frontier" views the solar system from three different periods in the history of mankind. First, Aristotle's view is presented. It is based on limited observations and entangled with mythology. The second view is that of Galileo. This Renaissance Italian astronomer first used a telescope to observe the heavens. His observations helped to separate mythology from astronomy. Finally, we take a close look at the planets as seen from our family of space probes—the Mariners and Pioneers. The latest discoveries about the planets are explored.

Daily Programs

28 May-1 September

12:00 pm, 1:00 pm, 2:00 pm, 3:30 pm

Additional Morning Program

Mon through Fri, July 7-August 15, 10:30 am

Admission is free; suggest children under four not attend. Admission to the star chamber is not permitted once the program has begun.

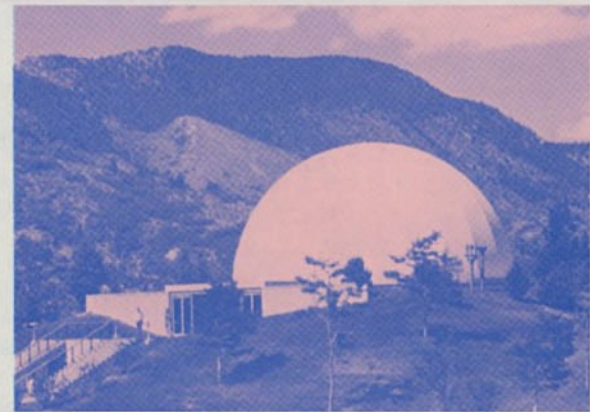

Planetarium Address:

Academy Planetarium
Navigation Division (CWIN)
USAF Academy, Colorado 80840

The Academy Planetarium makes use of the Spitz Model B Planetarium Projector which creates the appearance of the heavens using mechanical, electrical, and optical means. All stars visible to the unaided eye can be realistically portrayed on the 50-foot dome. These stars can be moved to show their position in the heavens for different geographical locations on earth, and for different periods in history. In addition to the stars, the projector can also show the motions of the sun, moon, and planets.

Along with the star projector, numerous other special-effects projectors are available to show eclipses, comets, asteroids, and meteor showers, and aurora. A unique dual horizon projection system is also utilized to add to the realism of presentations.

Public programs presented by the Academy Planetarium are intended for the education and enjoyment of visitors to the Academy. The Superintendent and the Commandant of Cadets sincerely hope your visit is a memorable one and that you will join us in encouraging outstanding young Americans to inquire into the unequalled opportunities available to Air Force Academy Cadets.
